

Meet Jack

Customer Relationship Manager

I am able to connect the various departments I have worked in, during my placements, together, helping others to understand their wider impacts on other areas within Incora, promoting a greater collaborative approach to produce excellent customer service both internal and externally.

Development and ## Opportunities

“Incora is small enough for your voice to be heard, yet large enough to provide rich global opportunities”

Knowing that each day brings a different challenge and Incora's continuous improvement mentality means that we're always striving to develop our people and processes. Although Incora is a global organisation, it still retains a smaller company's characteristics, so I am able to have a real impact.

My experience at Incora has been a consistent journey of development both personally and professionally as I came into the business as a work-based student. As part of this opportunity, I have experienced various roles within the organisation and this has helped me to understand Incora from a holistic perspective. Incora have supported me through my Masters degree and I have had the opportunity to spend 3 months at our US site.
